1. Auber (P.) China: An Outline of its Government, Laws, and Policy: and of the British and Foreign Embassies to, and Intercourse with, that Empire. FIRST EDITION, Chart of the Canton River, outlined in colour, viii, 419 pp, 8vo, 19th century half calf, slight wearing to joints and corners, (some browning to folds of map), London, 1834

The author was Secretary to the Honourable the Court of Directors of the East-India Company.

“The important change which has been made in our commercial relations with the Chinese empire naturally excites, in those who intend to avail themselves of the change, a desire for information upon all points connected with those relations. The British public could not look to a better source for such information, than to a gentleman whose official situation and experience have afforded him the real means of acquiring extensive knowledge of the various topics relating to British intercourse with China, and whose talents, diligence, and accuracy, are well ascertained by his excellent Analysis of the East-India Company.' We can hardly add to the recommendation which it receives from the name it bears on the title-page."-Asiatic Journal.

“ A guide to merchants and ship-owners, and a rade mecum to those who actually embark in the just opening trade to China. This panegyric will no doubt lead to its being widely consulted. In conclusion we have only to repeat, that we consider this volume to be one of great value, and worthy of being relied upon by the many who are deeply interested in the matters it so ably developes."-Literary Gazette.

Clifford (Jeronomy) The Case of Jeronomy Clifford, Merchant and Planter of Surinam, 55 pages, London, Printed the 10th of May, 1715

Together two pamphlets, folio, marble paper wrappers.

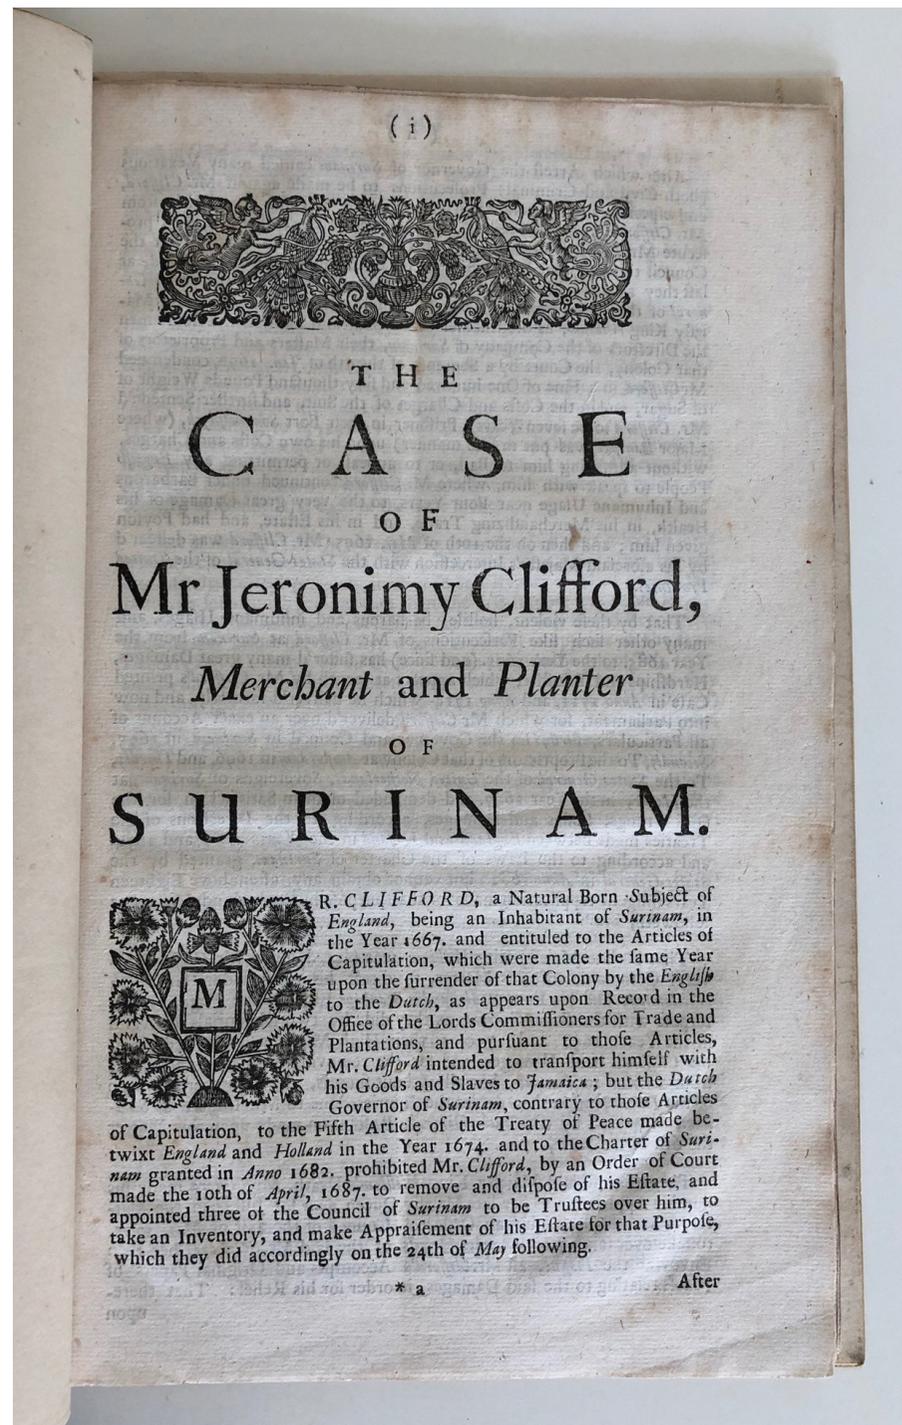

Sabin 13687

Clifford was one of the biggest plantation owners on Surinam in the 17th century. Surinam was settled by the English in 1650 but surrendered to the Dutch in 1674. The eighty English plantation owners wanted to leave and the ships the 'Hercules' and the 'America' were sent to transport them to Barbados of Jamaica.

In 1683 still living on Surinam, Clifford married the English woman Dorothea Matson who had inherited 'Coureabo' on the death of her husband Abraham Schoors. 'Courbado' was the largest sugar-plantation on Surinam (15 acres) with a mill, etc. and 22 huts for 117 slaves. In 1685 Clifford purchased a plantation on Jamaica.

Clifford's legal battle with the Dutch West India Company in Surinam regarding his sugar plantation, 'Corcabo'. This case was a result of the capture of Surinam by the Dutch. According to the Treaty of Breda (1667), English traders were given equal privileges with the Dutch, but because of the heavy taxation, Clifford decided to migrate to Jamaica. The Dutch, however, arrested him, sentenced him to seven years in gaol and fined him 150,000 pounds of sugar. Apart from putting his case for redress, this work contains a good description of the condition and resources in Guiana. It is one of a number of pleadings put out by Clifford, and the "case" must be one of the longest and most persistent on record. Clifford was evicted in 1684 and pleadings in his favour appeared as late as 1762.

Beddie's Bibliography of Captain James Cook Nos .648, 1216 and 1543. Holmes Bibliography 5,24,47.

First Voyage, H.M.S. "Endeavour", 1768-1771: The publicity stated object of the expedition was to observe the Transit of Venus across the sun, but the secret purpose was the search for the mythical Great Southern Continent supposed to lie somewhere between New Holland and South America. "Endeavour" Left Plymouth on 25th August 1768; among those aboard were Sir Joseph Banks, the naturalist Daniel Solander, and the artist Sydney Parkinson. After completing observations at Tahiti, they sailed westward. On 8th October 1769 Cook became the first European to set foot on New Zealand. They continued to the west and on 19th April 1770, the east coast of New Holland came into European view for the first time, thus determining the limits of the Pacific basin. Cook named the land New South Wales.

Second Voyage, H.M.S. "Resolution" and "Adventure", 1772-1775: To the Pacific, aided by new and improved methods of determining longitude and latitude, refined his discoveries in the South Pacific. The search for a Southern Continent continued and Cook determined once and for all that it did not exist.

“Resolution” and “Adventure” sailed from Plymouth on 13th July 1772. The complement included the naturalists John and George Forster, the artist William Hodges and the scientist Anders Sparman. Cook made the first crossing of the Antarctic Circle. March to June 1773 were spent in New Zealand waters then they worked variously north and east to Tahiti. At Huaheine, Omai a native of Utietea Island, was taken aboard “Adventure” and accompanied them back to England. In 1774 Cook continued through the Pacific from New Zealand stopping at Easter Island, the Marquesas, Tahiti and the Tuamotus. Further discoveries were made which included southern islands of the New Hebrides, New Caledonia, and Norfolk Island.

Third Voyage, H.M.S.”Resolution” And “Discovery” 1776-1780: Cook’s third Pacific voyage was as important for the exploration of the North Pacific as the first two had been for the South Pacific. It was also the best equipped both navigationally and scientifically, and resulted in the discovery of Hawaii which Cook himself regarded as his greatest Pacific discovery, and in the disproval of the existence of a navigable northern passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The “Resolution” sailed from Plymouth on 12th July 1776, with Cook, John Gore, Lieutenants James King and William Bligh. The “Discovery” which sailed on 1st August under the command of Charles Clerke, also aboard were James Burney, George Vancouver, William Ellis, George Dixon, Nathaniel Portlock, Edward Riou and the artist John Webber.

First sailing south to check Kerguelen’s Land in the Indian Ocean near the Antarctic, they called at Van Diemen’s Land, and at Queen Charlotte Sound, New Zealand. In March 1777 the Island of Mangala in the Cook group was sighted, then in May they discovered the Haapai section of the Tonga Islands. The island of Tubuai was sighted on 8 August 1777.

Sailing north from Borabora they discovered and named Christmas Island on that day, and on 18th January 1778 had their first sight of Hawaii, continuing on to California, they sighted the coast on 7th March, in the vicinity of Drake’s New Albion. The ships worked their way up the American coast, passed through Bering Strait to latitude 70 degrees 40 minutes before ice made them turn back, surveyed a part of the Asiatic coast and the island of Oonalashka(Alaska).

Sailing south on 26th November 1778 they discovered more of the Hawaiian chain(Maui) then worked their way round the coast of Hawaii to Kealakekua Bay, anchoring there on 17th January 1779. On 14th February Cook was tragically killed in a shoreline skirmish with the native Hawaiians.

The long-delayed official account of the third voyage was so eagerly awaited by the public that it was sold out on the third day after publication, and though the published price was £4. 14s. 6d. as much as 10 guineas was offered by would be purchasers.

ALEXANDER DALRYMPLE. F.R.S. LIBRARY

7. A Catalogue of the Extensive and Valuable Library of Books; Part 1(Only) Late Property of Alex. Dalrymple, esq. F.R.S.(Deceased) Hydrographer to the Board of Admiralty and the Ho. East India Company, Which Will be Sold by Auction, by Messrs. King and Lochee, at their Great Room, No. 38, King Street, Covent-Garden, On Monday, May 29, 1809 and Twenty-three Following Days, at Twelve O'Clock...FIRST EDITION, [I-IV] [1-136, mis-numbered, 157-223[224] blank, 8vo, modern boards, cloth spine, leather letter piece, uncut(portrait missing, some slight water staining), Printed by J. Baker, Covent-Garden, [London, 1809}

Alexander Dalrymple FRS (24 July 1737[1] – 19 June 1808) was a Scottish geographer and the first Hydrographer of the British Admiralty. He was the main proponent of the theory that there existed a vast undiscovered continent in the South Pacific, Terra Australis Incognita. He produced thousands of nautical charts, mapping a remarkable number of seas and oceans for the first time, and contributing significantly to the safety of shipping. His theories prompted a number of expeditions in search of this mythical land, until James Cook's second journey (1772–1775) led to the conclusion that, if it did exist, it was further south than the 65° line of latitude South.

Catalogue consists of Lots 1-7190, sold during a period of 24 days, listing a variety of subject he collected, such as Dictionaries, Grammars, Bibliography, Divinity, Bibliography, various works written in French, Italian and Latin, English works, Arts and Science.

The development and maintenance of his library was central to Dalrymple's geographical and literary research and to his East India Company work, both in subscription to new publications and in his esoteric and antiquarian acquisitions from book-sales and booksellers.

The sale catalogue of his books from Dalrymple's library after his death did not reflect the breadth of his collection: what was sold was only the residue of general books after the geographical and nautical materials had been taken by the Admiralty, and after the oriental collections had gone to William Marsden.

Even Dalrymple's general collection was wide-ranging: with William Herbert he developed his interest in seventeenth-century poetry, publishing in 1785 a selection of the verse of George Wither and bequeathing to the British Museum his collection of editions of Wither.

During the Russo-Persian war (1826-1828) Monteith was present at the Persian headquarters. after the treaty of Turkmenchan was signed in 1828. Monteith was appointed commissioner for the payment indemnity exacted for Persia by Russia, part of which was conveyed by him personally into the Russian camp. He was thus brought into contact with the Russian commander General Ivan Paskevitch, which led to his presence at the Russian headquarters at Tiflis during the war between the Russians and Turks in 1828. He was ordered to remain in Persia until the settlement of the Russo-Persian boundary.

Colonel Moneith of the East India Company, in 1832 received orders from His Royal Highness Abba Mirza to visit the whole province of Azerdbijan, Ghilan and the shores of the Caspian.

FIRST ACCOUNT OF CIRCUMNAVIGATION BY AN ENGLISH WOMEN AND PRIVATE TRAVELLER'S ACCOUNT OF THE NEW COLONY.

11. [Parker (Mrs. Mary Ann) A Voyage Round the World in the 'Gorgon' Man of War : Captain John Parker, Performed and Written by His Widow; for the Advantage of a Numerous family, FIRST EDITION, XXXII + I-I49+2 pages (advertisements) 8vo, original paper boards, uncut (rebacked in paper) London, 1795

Ferguson 229: Mendelssohn p.139. Sabin, 58715.Hill 2, Wantrup, 24.

Excellent copy in original state with outstanding provenance.

Mary Anne Parker's scarce account is one of the first eye-witness accounts of Australia by a private individual – earlier accounts were by officials – and the first account of the colony written by a woman. Mary Ann Parker, wife of the Captain, John Parker, sailed to New South Wales on H.M.S. Gorgon, which accompanied the Third Fleet to New South Wales in 1791 and which brought additional stores to the starving settlement following the loss of the store-ship Guardian the previous year. Accompanied also by Captain Gidley King, the intended Governor of Norfolk Island, his wife and family, Major Grose, Mr. Baines the Chaplain, Mr. Burton a botanist and thirty convicts, etc. This is also the earliest first-hand account of a circumnavigation by an English woman. She “describes in detail her life at Port Jackson and makes some perceptive comments on the transportation system and on the economic potential of the colony. As an honoured guest, she reveals the informal side of Governor Phillip who breakfasted with her on board the Gorgon and invited her to share his table on shore. An educated woman typical of her day, she includes a sensitive section on the Aborigines as well as much on the flora and fauna she saw on her visits ashore. Her remarks on the development of the colony include a discussion of “the propriety of establishing a whale-fishery on the coast of New Holland”.

The Gorgon departed Australia, December 1791 taking with her Watkin Tench and other mariners who had sailed with the First Fleet in 1788.

Cape Town was visited both on the outward and homeward voyages and the interesting account of the visits is one of the earliest, if not absolutely the first description of the country by a lady.

Provenance: With the book-plate of James Edge-Partington (1854—1930) English ethnographic collectors active in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. He travelled and personally collected artefacts in the Pacific. He was independently able to pursue his personal interests of world wide travel and establish an extensive private collection of Pacific artefacts and books.

FIRST EDITION, viii, 99 pp. 8 engraved maps and plans, 4to, uncut, contemporary boards rebacked with paper spine, new letter-piece, London, 1770

Vail 602; Clark 2: 53; Streeter sale 3: 1519; Graff 3302; Howes P396; Sabin 63103;

An very good copy of Pittman's Treatise on 18th-Century European Colonization of the Mississippi River.

First English account of the Mississippi Valley settlements. Pittman was employed for five years in surveying the Mississippi and exploring the western country. His account written from personal observation, is considered a source of the highest authority. The river charts and the plans of New Orleans and Mobile are especially valuable and there is much original material for the study of the French and Spanish settlements of old Louisiana, West Florida, and the Illinois and Missouri country.

Pittman's book begins with a preface, an introduction, and then proceeds in concise chapters covering locations along the Mississippi: New Orleans; River Ibbeville; Description of Massaic, Part of the River Amit, And the River Ibbeville; Pointe Coupee; Tonicas; Pelousas; Natches; Post of Arcansas; Cascasquias; La Praire de Roches; Fort Chartres; Saint Philippe; Kaoquias; Saint Louis, or Paincourt; Sainte Genevieve, or Misere; Of the Country of the Illinois; Of the Government of the Country of Illinois When belonging to the French; Of the Inhabitants; L'Arret de la Cour Superieure de la Province; Arret of the Superior Council of the Province;

The engraved maps included in the book are detailed,

1. Kitchin. Plan of New Orleans.
2. Kitchin. Draught of the R. Ibbeville
3. Kitchin. Plan of Fort Rosalia.

16. Stockenstrom (Sir Andries) Light and Shade: As Shown on the Character of the Hottentots of the Kat River Settlement, and in the Conduct of the Colonial Government Towards Them: Being the Substance of a Speech by the Hon'ble Sir Andries Stockenstrom, in Legislative Council of the Cape of Good Hope, FIRST EDITION, 8vo, [i-iv] [i-ii] + 98 pages, unbound, housed in a cloth folder, Saul Solomon, Cape Town, 1854

New Mendelsohn p.410.

A speech in defence of the Hottentots of the Kat River Settlement.

The Kat River Settlement was thus born out of the conflict between the Cape Colony and the Xhosa. It was also seen by those who founded it as part of the bulwark by which the Colony could be protected from the inroads of the Xhosa in subsequent wars. Its inhabitants were effectively granted their lands under military tenure, that is to say the able-bodied men were required to serve in the British forces as a militia in the event, all too frequent as it turned out, of renewed clashes between the Colony and the Xhosa.

17. [Trenchard (John)] A comparison between the proposals of the Bank and the South-Sea Company: wherein is shewn, that the proposals of the first are much more advantageous to the publick, than those of the latter; if they do not offer such terms to the annuitants as they will accept of. SECOND EDITION, 18 pages + leaf of advertisements, 8vo, boards, leather letter-piece (title stained), J. Roberts, London, 1720

Goldsmith 5885. Kress 3331. Sabin 15028. Sperling 147.

A series of new measures were implemented in order to restore confidence and the estates of the company directors were confiscated in an attempt to remunerate South Sea Company investors. The remaining South Sea Company shares were allocated to the East India Company and the Bank of England. A proposal was even made in Parliament to place bankers in sacks filled with snakes and thrown into the Thames River.
